NEW INSURANCE LAWS A REAL BENEFIT

TO WORLD WAR VETERANS FORFEITURES ARE REMOVED

Amendments to Reed-Johnson Act Gives Additional Advantages To Former Soldiers—Prior To Passage of Changes, Wilful Misconduct Barred Right To Compensation.

Amendments to the Reed Johnson act, providing relief for former soldiers of the United States, greatly liberalize the law and afford additional advantages to the ex-service men, according to Director Frank T. Hines, of the Veterans' Bureau.

"One of the outstanding features of this amendment is the provision which makes compensation payable to all veterans of the World war who are suffering with paralysis, paresis or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden as the result of any disability, without regard to whether such disability is the result of wilful misconduct and irrespective of whether the veteran is actually hospitalized," Hines said.

"Prior to the passage of this amendment wilful misconduct barred all right to compensation, except if and while the veteran was hospitalized in Veterans' Bureau hospitals. Another important provision in the new legislation is the consolidation of the former provisions of the World War Veterans' act relating to forfeitures of compensation. Under the amendment each period of service stands alone, and a dishonorable discharge from one enlistment will have no effect on the payment of compensation for disabilities incurred during an enlistment from which the man was honorably discharged, according to Hines.

It was further provided that the discharge of a person for having concealed the fact that he was a minor at the time of enlistment will not bar the benefits, provided that service was otherwise honorable. All amendments were retroactive to April 6, 1917.

"Provision for burial expenses has been extended to include funeral expenses; and congress has left it to the judgment of the director to provide by regulation what items shall be included as expenses for burial and for funeral and to what persons payment should be made," Hines said.

"Provisions of the statute which prohibited the concurrent payment of compensation and pension to child, widow, or parent, other than a mother, have been removed. The Civil war veteran who is drawing pension on account of his service can now receive, also, compensation for the death of his son; a widow of a Civil war veteran entitled to a pension on account of the service or death of her husband, is also entitled to compensation of she has lost a son in the World war."

The law provides authorization to the director to apportion disability compensation of insane inmates of institutions to the wife, children and dependent parents of such inmates.

For those whose disability of service origin, makes necessary the wearing of prosthetic appliances which will not allow the use of ordinary clothing the director is authorized to furnish clothing especially made to accommodate the use of the appliances.

Veterans pursuing courses of training under government supervision are eligible for compensation for injuries received while in these schools.

All who took part in the program are to be congratulated for the excellent entertainment, which also included refreshments of ices, cake and coffee following the theatricals.

REMINISCENCES OF A FORMER CITIZEN

Who Promises To Make Circleville a Visit If He Survives Another Year.

Mr. John D. Wagner, of Minneapolis, Minn., writing to his old-time friend, James A. Graham, recalls many happy incidents of their life here in Circleville when, as boys they lived and played as boys of that generation did. These reminiscences, which he says come frequently to him now, were rekindled recently by the receiving of a marked copy of The Herald sent him by his sister, Mrs. Jennie Naumann, giving an account of a birthday celebration for Mr. Graham last January.

Mr. Wagner being three years younger than his friend, he writes that if he (Mr. Graham) will hold onto himself for a while he will come to see him if he survives another year.

Plunging into the past with "Do you remember"—he recalls the time when Mr. Graham lived with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Groce, parents of Col. C. E. Groce, in the old Fickardt home in East Main street, where the stone steps on the sidewalk make it a landmark now. Mr. Wagner's parents were neighbors on the west, the house they occupied being now razed to give a lawn to the beautiful new home of Mr. Fred L. Fickardt. Going swimming in Hargus creek reminds him of the time Mr. Graham rescued him when he had bantered another friend, Jacob Dumuth, and having won the banter was nearly drowned and unconscious when brought to the earth by Mr. Graham, aided by Mr. Dumuth. The residence now owned by Mr. Chas. Will was then the Dumuth home just west of Wagner's and the old well on the line between the two properties came near being the death trap of little 3-year-old Ella Dumuth, who, when climbing the fence, fell into the 32 feet deep open well, breaking her leg but fortunately falling on an old well lid that had rotted and fallen in. He then recalls the next neighbors west, Daniel Stein, who owned a jewelry store in West Main street. Next to them in a house that was razed a few years ago by the Editor of The Herald, when erecting the modern home now owned and occupied by Harvey Dresback, lived the widow Harts, mother of Mrs. Charles W. Olds, of East Franklin street, and Mrs. Amanda McCune of Columbus.

The very comfortable home of W. E. Caskey was then the M. E. parsonage and Rev. Merrill, who later became a bishop in the Methodist Church, lived there. A very dear friend of the minister was Thomas Orpwood, a shoe maker, who Mr. Wagner states made him a pair of boots after he left Circleville. He next recalls the blacksmith and wagon shop on the site of the residence of J. F. Bales and Ira L. May, owned and operated by Jacob Welter, grandfather of Welter E. Bartholomew and Crist Schwarz, father of the late Charles Schwarz.

The old United Brethren Church which stood on the site of the new church of that denomination, had a residence in the basement in which resided the parents of a mutual friend, Mr. John Wholever whose wife was Miss Jane Morris, a sister of Milt. Morris, local barrister. Another friend was Peter Foerst, brother of Henry Foerst, whose father was a gardener and lived where Edward Blum now resides, the garden joining the pasture of Mr. Graham's uncle, where the horse of which Mr. Graham took so much pride, grazed. Mr. Wagner says it was a pacer and that his old friend used to wash the horse's tail with Castile soap to make it bushy and really took as much care of that tail as the bob-haired girls of today do of their tresses.

The McCrea place—the house of which is now the Zwicker residence—extended from the alley known as McCrea Alley now widened into an avenue, to the residence now owned by Mrs. Anna Leist.

The parents of those days raised their children in the straight and narrow according to Mr. Wagner, who says that Mr. Graham's aunt demanded that when 9 o'clock came the suitors of her daughters were not only expected to leave but did so. Some of the suitors, one especially, Benjamin Foresman, must have come in for some joshing. Then he speaks of the parlor dances which they watched, saying that public dances were not indulged in. Mrs. Groce was wonderfully rewarded for the motherly care she bestowed upon her children, Mary, her eldest daughter marrying her girlhood lover, Benjamin Foresman, son of one of the finest families in the town, Ella, who married Frank Shulze and became the mother of Charles G. Shulze, president of the Third National Bank, and Jennie becoming the wife of Lemuel Boggs, of whom Mr. Wagner says "a more noble young man could not be found."

Jonathan Sherman lived in what is now the U. B. Community House, next to him was Mr. and Mrs. Crayne. Across the street lived John L. King and his wife, affectionately known as Aunt Eliza who was like a mother to Mr. Graham's sister-in-law, Miss Sallie Fitzpatrick.

Just before leaving Circleville in 1870, they went to the photographer, M. K. Marshall or Calvin Bookwalter, he could not remember which, and posed for their pictures, the manner of their pose meaning a farewell to each other. He later visited here and recalls that Mr. Graham was then working with John Wolever for James Pedrick.

He then remembers Dick Moffitt, who for years was connected with the local fire department, John, George and Cad Brunner, Mr. Ensworth, the Delaplaines, Wm. Doan, and Mark Radcliffe who married as he says, Lizzie Crouse; Henry Alspaugh, the tailor who made him a suit of clothes after he left Circleville, W. S. Potter, the shoemaker, Joshua and Caleb Glick, sons of a brewery man whose interests in the business were purchased by Michael Hoover who married a Miss Goff of Pickaway township. Samuel A. Morris and B. H. Bostwick whose wife was a daughter of Lawyer Hall, was next in his mind. The banker, Henry Hedges and wife, George Stouch and Charles Littleton were all described as dear good friends. He states that his uncles, Isaac and Martin Dresback remembered him financially, and of 42 uncles and aunts and 96 cousins, only one aunt and a few cousins remain.

We publish these reminiscences in the hope that some at least of our readers may get a little of the kick that the recipient did as was evidenced by the expression on his face when he gave it to The Herald.

The consumption of eggs in the Philippines is remarkably large. Throughout the country, remote from the larger port cities, chickens and eggs form a considerable portion of the diet of the people who can afford more than rice and fish.

Useful Chamois

The chamois is about the size of a large goat, but the neck is longer in proportion and the body shorter. The flesh of the chamois is highly esteemed and its skin is made into leather, the original "shammyskin" being obtained from this animal.

Law Protects the Frog

On account of the great demand for frogs' legs in France the batrachian was threatened with extinction. To prevent this a law was passed protecting frogs during certain parts of the year just as fish and birds are protected. The operation of the law is said to be giving the frogs a chance.

Popular Fabrics for Spring Wear

Surah, Taffeta and Satin in Lead—Printed Materials
Are in Vogue.

There has been a perceptible slackening in the launching of novel materials this spring, which can be attributed to the increased elaboration of the more basic elements of the mode, notes a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. As long as dresses adhered to the same outline and not greatly changed details, fashion received its essential variation through numerous new materials, and now that a new silhouette and ornate details have entered the mode there is less need for elaborate fabrics—and consequently fewer new materials.

Printed crepes de chine, marocain, georgette, chiffon and alpaca are very popular in Paris this spring. The designs are smaller than last year, though some large flower patterns are promised for the mid-season summer collections. Spots are very much in favor, both the small, closely-packed sort the size of a pea, dotted regularly all over the material, and those of varied sizes scattered here and there. Small conventional designs are very prominent, especially the flower and leaf patterns in black on a light ground which are arranged in squares.

Surah and taffeta are two materials that have emerged from a long stay on the shelf. Both are charmingly novel to the young, and awaken delightful memories of past triumphs in the minds of those whose youth is fast becoming a dim recollection. For the smart silk tailor-made for town wear both are incomparably smart.

Painted materials are new and are enjoying an increasing vogue. The most modish are similar to the quiet, discreet designs and colors used by Renee. Geometrical designs on woolen and silk fabrics are carried out in self tones in a darker shade than the material they decorate. This fashion was first launched by Madame Agnes for her hats and scarves, but the Paris couture was quick to appreciate its beauty, and the success of painted stuffs seems to be assured for the present season.

Color shows more novelty than materials. After an unbroken popularity of at least three seasons, red is likely to be eclipsed by the new petunia and purple shades. Bois de rose has ousted golden beige from its long vogue. Blue, navy and the lighter shades, from bleu de France and cornflower to delft and turquoise blue are strong favorites. Gray is distinguished. Indeed, now that pale complexions are replacing last year's copper tints, the harmony of gray is certain to appeal to women with an eye for nuance.

Stripes Run Two Ways in True Paris Fashion

This washable silk sports frock affords a novelty in that the stripes run two ways, a popular fashion in Paris. The hand embroidery motif at the hip adds an interesting touch.

Color Combinations to Be Used This Season

Fine brown lace draped over and entirely covering peach-colored satin. A black crepe de chine dinner frock, trimmed with loops of beads shading from pale to dark gray. Black rep is used by Nicole Groult for a little street frock with a yellow taffeta waistcoat and white organdie jabot and cuffs. Navy chiffon is posed over violet satin in an interesting afternoon frock. A charming evening frock is of chiffon shading from sky blue to sapphire, with the sole trimming a girdle of brilliants. A lovely afternoon frock is made of two shades of fuchsia taffeta. A stunning evening gown is of white satin trimmed with jet and crystals. Favorite color combinations are "natural" and brown, orchid and purple, pervenche blue and white, navy blue with red, and lawn green and gray.

Important Naval Battle

The famous naval battle of Trafalgar was fought off Cape Trafalgar, Spain, October 21, 1805. The English fleet numbered 27 ships of the line, and were commanded by Admiral Nelson. The combined French and Spanish fleets, under the French admiral Villeneuve, numbered 33 ships. The allied fleet was signally defeated after a bloody contest; their three admirals were taken, and 19 of their ships were captured, sunk or destroyed. Nelson was mortally wounded in the action, and the chief command devolved upon Collingwood. The victory of Trafalgar crushed the naval power of France, and put an end to Napoleon's projected invasion of England.—Kansas City Star.

COLLECT EVIDENCE OF BIRD MIGRATION

Many returns from the bird-banding work at one of the colonies in Lake Michigan have been received by the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. Two Caspian terns were found in Nova Scotia and three were located as far away as Colombia, South America. Others were found along the routes to these distant points, indicating the course followed by the migrating birds between summer and winter homes, says the New York Times.

The three terns reported from South America were found just at the time when further bird banding was being done at their original colony in Michigan last year, thereby proving that the young birds do not breed in their first year. From the last year's work at this colony one Caspian tern has already been reported from Back Bay, Va.

A common tern banded in Maine has been reported at the mouth of the Niger river on the west coast of Africa. It is possible that the Caspian tern may likewise migrate to the eastern hemisphere, although no indications to this effect are to be found in the returns received from birds banded at the Lake Michigan colony.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

MODERN HOME IN MONTCLAIR.

The Montclair Improvement company has sold the lot at the corner of Montclair avenue and Beverly road. This is one of the best locations in the addition and the purchaser promises to build a modern home on this site before the summer is over.

It will be known as "The Well Built Home," and will be all the name implies. The lots in the Montclair addition are beautifully located and this part of the city will become most popular, as nearly all the homes built so far are of the "de luxe" order and the occupants are of the same class.

SMOKELESS CITIES MAY BECOME REALIZATION

Successful Experiments Conducted at Illinois University in Production of Domestic Fuel.

Urbana, Ill.—The realization of smokeless cities is seen in the success of a series of experiments of a semi-commercial scale by the University of Illinois. The work is that of Prof. S. W. Parr.

One of Professor Parr's theories is that smoky cities are due to domestic fires rather than factory fires. He started his experiments which led to this new process of manufacture in 1902, when a strike in the anthracite region cut off the supply of smokeless domestic fuel for this locality.

The fuel is now being manufactured at the university in such quantities that it can be tried out in several house furnaces and grates and a local gas company to determine its value.

Only Illinois coal is used. It is carbonized in vertical retorts made of special iron, nickel and chromium alloy, which are heated externally by gas. In addition to the primary product—coke—several by-products are obtained which are themselves worth as much or more as the original cost of the coal.

A rich gas, similar to common fuel gas but of a higher heat value; tar which is chemically different from the ordinary by-product coke-oven tar and which offers great opportunity for research and chemical development; light oils, which may be used as motor fuel, and ammonia, which may be converted into a chemical fertilizer, are some of the most important and interesting by-products of the new process.

The experiments are being carried on in the experimental fuel plant of the engineering experiment station at the university. Professor Parr is assisted in his work by Prof. T. E. Layng of the department of chemistry, who developed the process more fully as his thesis for his degree of doctor of philosophy, which he took at the university in 1917.

Professor Parr was recently appointed American editor of the International magazine Fuel, and is well known for his researches in all phases of coal manufacture, resources and content.

Cross-Words Hit Japan;
Adapted to Ideographs

Tokyo.—Now Japan has been inoculated with the cross-word puzzle mania. A foreign daily published in English in Tokyo had been printing American cross-word puzzles for the edification of foreigners and English-speaking Japanese for several weeks when Robert Alexander, a teacher in a university in Tokyo, adapted the cross-word puzzle idea to the Japanese ideogram system and produced a puzzle whose solution involves the use of Japanese Kata Kana.

Kata Kana is the phonetic ideogram alphabet of forty-six characters in which any Japanese syllabic sound may be expressed. It is infinitely more simple than the highly complicated system of Chinese characters and may be readily mastered by foreigners in a few months of assiduous study, while the thousands of Chinese characters used in classical Japanese writing require years and years of study.

When the puzzle was printed in a foreign newspaper the definitions were printed in English, but if the idea is taken up by the Japanese newspapers the puzzle may be printed entirely in Japanese and with proper explanations of the principle involved may be solved by Japanese with no knowledge of English or of the American cross-word puzzle.

Agrees, for Her Children, to Forego "Gay Times"

Wolfeboro, N. H.—Facing a sentence of six months in the county jail at Ossipee for deserting her two young children, Mrs. Edwin Brown, twenty years old, agreed to return to her husband and care for them and the sentence was suspended, when she was arraigned before Judge Trickey.

Mrs. Brown was arrested by Chief of Police Thompson, following publication in the local paper of the following ad:

"Whereas, my wife, Doris Brown, wishing for a gay time, has left me and her two little ones, a boy fourteen months old, and a girl four years old, in July. At present my mother is with me, doing what she can, but is unable to continue for long. I wish to get someone to come and do my work and care for the children, one whom I can trust to give them good care. Anyone who cares to answer this, address Edwin M. Brown, Box 96, Wolfeboro, N. H."

Four Cured of Leprosy
in Louisiana, U. S. Says

Washington.—Four men who entered the national home for lepers at Carrville, La., several years ago, have been discharged from the institution as cured. The United States public health service announced that the men have been under close observation for a year, and during the entire time the leprosy bacillus had been absent from their body tissues.

Cross-Words Again

Los Angeles, Cal.—As a result of the abnormal popularity of dictionaries due to the cross-word puzzle craze, the Los Angeles Public Library has been compelled to set a time limit of five minutes on the use of the dictionary by any one person at one time.

AMUSEMENTS

The Paramount picture, "The Swan" written and produced for the screen by Dimitri Buchowetzki from Ference Molnar's stage success is the feature at the Met theater Wednesday and Thursday.

Adolphe Menjou, Richard Cortez and Frances Howard are featured in the leading roles.

The story is one of Princess Alexandra the Swan, whose mother, ruler of a small kingdom in the Balwans, plans to marry her off to a prince of a neighboring principality. But the girl is in love with the young court tutor.

A reception is given in honor of the visiting prince and it ends in a duel between the prince and the tutor. The princess steps in between the two men and scandalizes the entire court by putting her arms around the tutor and kissing him fervently.

The prince's mother leads her son out of the scene, very much put out at the idea that anyone could possibly prefer a common tutor to her princely son.

Alexandra convinces her mother that her love for the tutor is far greater than rank or tradition and the end of the picture finds the princess happy in the arms of her tutor lover.

So much for the plot.

Adolphe Menjou plays Prince Albert. Cortez is the tutor and Miss Howard is Princess Alexandra. Helen Leo Worthing, former "Follies" beauty is cast as an alluring blonde lady-in-waiting who flirts with the philandering prince to the distraction of the scheming mothers who, try as they may, can't seem to get prince and princess together. To sum up "The Swan" is an unusually pleasing comedy-romance in a royal setting.

MEMORIAL DAY OLD SOLDIERS ARE PASSING

American Legion Asks all to Cooperate—Pay Proper Respect For Flag.

On behalf of the old soldiers of the Civil war the American Legion asks the fullest cooperation of the community in making Memorial day what it should be. Memorial day comes this year on Saturday, the day of the week that our city is fullest of bustle and business. There will be the usual tendency toward the holiday spirit combined with the urge of business and the necessity of weekend preparations for Sunday. But the American Legion urges that the Memorial day be thoughtfully and properly celebrated and largely attended. The public little realizes how few of the Veterans-in-Blue are left to carry on. Indeed, the responsibility now largely rests with the Legion for carrying forward the plans for Memorial day. This they do gladly in honor to all the men who have laid their lives on the altar of service for the ideals of their country. And every member of the community should also pause long enough to give honor due those who have laid down their lives. To this end the Legion asks the cooperation of every person in the city and country round. Veterans of the World war are urged to take their place in line of march.

Another matter in which the Legion asks a fuller cooperation of all is in the matter of due respect to the Colors. No soldier will omit this respect. No citizen ought to disregard it. The flag, the emblem of our country, the symbol of her spirit and ideals is passing before us; the fitting answer to the throbbing of patriotism we feel is erect attention and uncovered head. For the soldier in uniform the respect is expressed by attention and salute. The Legion asks that this attention to the Colors be given in every instance. As the Colors pass by you on Memorial day, stop where you are, face them and stand quietly erect until they have passed. Men and boys will remove the hat as well. Such respect to the emblem of our country is a mark of distinction to a community.

—ANNOUNCEMENT—

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

(United Press)
Columbus, O., May 26—Ultra-fundamentalists in the Presbyterian church lost another battle late today when the general assembly by an overwhelming vote, dismissed the charges against the radical New York Presbyterian for permitting Dr. Barry Emerson Fosdick, a liberal, to occupy the pulpit of the First church of New York City.

Canton, Ohio, May 26—Abducted by four men, robbed of $135 alimony and branded on the arm with the letters K. K. K. was the over night experience of James Thoburn, 25, he reported to police.

Thoburn said he hid the money in his shirt because he was going to pay it to his wife as back alimony but the kidnapers found it when they began preparing him for the branding.

Cleveland, May 26—Hungry and discouraged, James Almsay attempted to drown himself in Lake Erie today. Police overpowered and rescued him. A note in his coat pocket said: "I never had a friend. Nobody wants me. I can't get a job that suits me. I can't have no fun. I am going to hell. Please notify my parents."

To Go With It

A woman who liked to shine at slight expense presided at what she deemed a fashionable bridge, and for prizes gave away boxes of sea salt. As her guests departed she overheard one of them say: "Girls, if you'll come to my house I'll present you all with a bath."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Drastic Prohibition

The consumption of wine reached such a high point about a thousand years before the Christian era that Lycurgus, king of Thrace, passed a prohibition act, the thoroughness of which cannot be questioned. A strict abstainer himself, he forbade the use of wine to his subjects, and rooted up all the vines within his dominion.

"BUBBL'ING BROOK FARM" BUTTER.

It is made from nice, clean cream on the farm of J. H. Tobias & Sons' "Bubbling Brook Farm" near Lancaster, Ohio, with F. B. Karshner as farm manager where they have as fine a herd of Jersey cows as you find any place.

The cream being clean and sweet needs no pasturizing or neutralizing hence the delicate flavor of fine country butter is preserved. All the water used is pure sparkling water from a spring running thirty gallons per minute. The washing of the butter with this pure water also adds to the delicate flavor.

It is sold in Circleville by the following groceries, E. S. Neuding, Stocklen grocery, The Hudnell grocery, W. R. Pickens, G. C. Pickens, E. & C. Wolf, George Rihl and Charles Miller. 27mayd1.

Japan Using More Wool

There has been a remarkable increase in the consumption of wool in Japan, a silk country. In 1923 its imports were 6,655,000 pounds, whereas in 1923 they were 48,985,000 pounds. HOW SHE FOUND ANOTHER LOVER

By JENNIE LITTLE

(© 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE engine seemed to snort disdainfully as it stopped at the miniature station, waited impatiently for one passenger to alight, then hastened on across the prairie in search of a happier destination. As the train receded that passenger took a quick step toward it, as if, after all, an unloved friend was better than none, but the black smoke waved a decisive farewell against the sky. She scanned the horizon anxiously and a great relief surged into her eyes as a horseman came galloping through the dust.

"Bart!" she called with shy eagerness as he dismounted. "I was so afraid you hadn't—oh, I beg your pardon—I thought—"

The rider, lifting a shabby hat, spoke deprecatingly. "I take it you're Miss Linda Gale from Newbury, Bart—couldn't come. Business called him away—asked me to look after you till he gets back. I'm Alvin Lovell, a rancher, too. Can you ride?"

Linda mounted awkwardly. "I hope you won't be too much set back," he said worriedly at the end of her ride, "if things don't look just as you planned."

Her face worked as she viewed the shabby shack. "I wouldn't mind—if only Bart were here. Won't Bart be back tonight?" she cried with a quick intake of breath. "He said the minister would meet us and we would be married right away."

He shook his head unwillingly. "I guess he can't be back that soon. Will you be afraid? There's no neighbors, but I'll be out in that shed, and will hear you if you speak."

A wave of homesickness engulfed her. "I don't know how I can stand it without Bart."

Six wakeful nights the girl lay and wondered. Six days she waited, helped by Lovell to cook their meals and explore the ranch. In spite of all, she grew to love the rolling wheat fields, the friendly cattle and horses, and even overcame her fear of the saddle, blushing at his hearty praise. Yet she held aloof coldly from his quiet friendliness, even though she could not help noting his great kindness to every living creature about the place.

Then a tempest came. Rain poured in torrents. Thunder crashed like besieging cannon. Hail battered ruthlessly. Lovell, hurrying from the field, found her at the breaking point.

"I won't stand it any longer," she shrieked hysterically. "You—don't explain about Bart. Why didn't he leave me a letter? Why doesn't he write now, or come? How do I know but you killed him for his money?"

"I'll put you straight about that," said a hard voice. "It's what I've come 18 miles for."

They turned in astonishment to the woman, drenched, disheveled, who had entered unheard in the noise of the storm. She sneered at the girl.

"Bart Thorn tried to make you think he loved you and could give you a happy, comfortable home, didn't he? He's a slinking, yellow coyote, who would rob and desert his dying mother. I've been his wife for eight years, and I know. Two years ago he went East for special reasons. 'Tain't always healthy for thieves to stay too long in the same climate. That's when he found you. And that's when he planned to get you here, take what money you'd saved, and abuse you a while for pleasure, probably, before he was through. He even bragged about it to me. Then when you started, he found you had nothing. The day before you was due, Alvin, here, found him drunk on the track, and the 5:20 due. He took him home, staying the night to help me. And for saving his worthless life, Bart got up before morning, stole every cent Alvin was taking to the bank, and skipped—on Alvin's horse. And when Alvin heard about you, he walked these 18 miles, got another horse, and went to bring you here, his own ranch; for the one Bart claimed isn't paid for, and I never know what day I'll be without a roof over my head. Since then you know what he's done for you—you know what sort he is. But have you appreciated it? I'll bet not! Now, do you still love Bart?"

The girl spoke like a somnambulist whom some one had rudely shaken awake. "I guess—'twas mostly the idea of getting away from the narrow life I had. I never had anyone to care about me, and he made me think he did. My sickness took all my money, except enough to buy a ticket. How can I ever get back?"

Lovell lifted a grave face. "Miss Gale, I've just been keeping this from you till I could scrape money enough for your return fare. I figured you would be less miserable if you was looking forward to something as long as you had to stay, even if you did worry. But I'll try and borrow the money tomorrow. It goes hard to have you misjudge and hate me, for, you see, I've loved you mighty hard from the first."

He turned away, but the girl stepped before him with that same intent, newly awakened, look. "Why," she faltered bravely, "if—if it's any trouble to get that money, you can just—just get enough for the license and minister, for—I think I'd like to stay."

His arms reached out, and even the grim face of the older woman seemed to soften, as the truant sun burst again through the clouds and filled the shack with flaming glory.

Many "Vicars of Bray"

The vicar of Bray is said to have been a clergyman of the Church of England, who managed by skillfully adjusting his religious opinions to the requirements of the times, to retain his preferments during the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary and Elizabeth. Other authorities, however, make him a subject of Charles II, James II, William and Mary, Anne and George I. His name is variously given as Symon Symonds, Simon Alleyne or Allen, and Pendleton. However that may be, the phrase "Vicar of Bray" has found a place in the vernacular, and is commonly applied to one who renounces allegiance to his party whenever he finds his safety or his interests imperiled.—Kansas City Times.

MIRA, SECOND LARGEST KNOWN STAR, MEASURED

Through Observations at Mt. Wilson
Scientist Finds Body Has Diameter of 250,000,000 Miles.

Washington.—Measurements at the Mount Wilson observatory of the Carnegie Institution have established that Mira, the remarkable variable star discovered by David Fabricius in 1596 in the constellation Cetus, is the second largest known star, thereby displacing the noted Betelgeuse for that honor.

With an angular diameter of about 250,000,000 miles, it is exceeded only by Antares, chief star of the constellation Scorpio, with a diameter of 400,000,000 miles. It is larger by about 25 per cent than Betelgeuse in the constellation Orion, which was measured for the first time about four years ago.

Appearing but a speck in the sky to the naked eye, the measurements of Mira were made by Dr. Francis E. Pease with the 20-foot Michelson interferometer attached to the observatory's 100-inch telescope, the same with which the first measurements of Betelgeuse were obtained.

Announcement of the measurement was made by the Carnegie institution on the basis of advices from Mount Wilson. "The results indicate," the announcement says, "an angular diameter for Mira of about six one-hundredths of a second of arc, a value about 25 per cent larger than Betelgeuse. The most probable value of the distance is 165 light years. Assuming this distance, the diameter of the star is 250,000,000 miles.

"The star varies greatly in light through a period of about eleven months, its brightness changing as much as 200-fold in that interval. The measurements of the star's diameter were made when the star was near its recent maximum.

"The name Mira, or 'The Wonderful,' was given to the star soon after the discovery of its remarkable variations of light by Fabricius in 1596. It is the most noted example of a class of variable stars of similar type, of which there are about 150 known. They are deep red in color and are doubtless all stars of immense size, low temperature and exceedingly low density.

"As a class these stars are moving very rapidly in the sky, some of them having velocities of more than 100 miles a second toward or away from the earth."

Finnish Steam Bath

Something of Ordeal

When the Finlanders carried off many prizes at the Olympic contests at Paris there was wonder as to what natural qualities or methods of living had given them this advantage. A writer in a Victoria paper, an English-speaking school teacher, who lived in a Finnish colony on Malcolm island, off the northern end of Vancouver island, thinks she has discovered one cause. It is the steam bath, which is so popular with the race and is even continued under hard and primitive conditions of the west coast of British Columbia. The steam bath with the Finns is as popular as the bathroom or afternoon tea with the English.

On Saturday afternoon the entire family took their steam bath, the boys and father first, returning "pink and clean and slumberous," after which the visitor and the women folk took the lantern and went down to the shed.

A blast of hot air greeted us as we opened the door. The shed was in two divisions and I gathered we were all to undress in the outer part.

"The inner part of the shed was as hot as a moderate oven. On one side was a high platform and in the middle of the floor a big cairn of stones, something like an old-fashioned brick oven. Underneath was a fireplace, under which the fire was dying out. There was a tub of cold water, but I couldn't see any hot water. The girls and I got up on the platform, and in the dim light of the lantern I felt as though I were taking part in some prehistoric ceremony. I also felt extremely uncomfortable and absurd, physically and mentally. The heat was terrific near the roof, but I am a sport and I gave out no sign or sound of complaint.

"The mother, clothed in naught but her innocence, looking like a plump priestess performing sacrificial rites, began to pour water over the hot stones, and the place filled with steam. "You weel now sweat," said the girls, "and be not so hot." Sweat I certainly did.

"They passed along a piece of soap and little bunches of cedar twigs. Rub yourself to get the dirt out," they said. These cedar bunches were the only loofahs these children of nature had ever heard of, and I meditatively rubbed the 'tirt' certainly came out.

"I had a headache next morning, and when Saturday came round again I said as tactfully as I could that I thought I would just have my usual hot water bath in the washub."

To Dislodge Bone

When a fishbone has become lodged in the throat, suck the juice of a lemon. The acid usually dissolves the mineral part, making the bone flexible and it is then easy to remove it. If no lemon be at hand, swallow as soon as possible the raw white of an egg whole. This often removes the obstruction. It is a mistake to take any fluid with a view to dislodge the intruder. Masticate a piece of bread thoroughly, and when it is swallowed most likely the bone will be released.

LONDON NOW HAS ABOUT 8,000,000

Telephone Area of City Covers 735 Square Miles.

London.—Recent unofficial estimates of the population of Greater London have put the figures at about 8,000,000. The London telephone area covers 735 square miles, and the metropolitan police district 691 square miles, and both are said to be growing rapidly.

The distance across London from various sections of the greater city vary from twenty to thirty miles.

Sir Kingsley Wood, M. P., speaking recently on the housing question, announced that the total number of houses authorized at the beginning of 1924 aggregated 198,808, and of these 52,109 had already been completed.

Many Londoners are confirmed town dwellers, the speaker said, and a certain percentage of them always would be. They preferred the cinema to the country, and they disliked a long journey which cut into their leisure.

Without imitating the worst features of the American skyscraper, it should be possible to erect dwellings with generous gardens or ground space and with proper arrangement for decent living, and thus work out an eventual remedy to help relieve London's housing situation, which, for generations, has been one of the city's most difficult problems.

In spite of its growth, London had 18 fewer fires in 1924 than in 1923. The total last year was 3,845, of which 53 were serious.

Export Trade in Radio Shows Interest Abroad

Washington.—A survey of foreign markets by the commerce department to develop the possibilities of further expanding this country's export trade in radio manufactures, which showed a remarkable growth in 1924 by reaching a total value of $6,030,914, has disclosed a varying prospect in the countries covered in the first study, just completed.

Some of them, such as Bulgaria, absolutely forbid broadcasting and the sale or use of receiving sets. In Belgium, radio users can hear German, French, English and Hollandese broadcasting stations, and there is a lively receiving public, but they are getting their radio supplies at a low rate for American competition.

Germany is practically excluding radio manufacturers from abroad by an import licensing system, but in England, where 1,200,000 receiving sets show the new art has attained a popularity second only to that in the United States, there is little restriction on American imports of new material.

Scandinavian countries also offer brisk markets for the purveying of receiving sets, and Poland is freeing users from limitations previously placed upon the broadcaster and receiver.

Canada, however, is still the largest customer of the United States for radio apparatus, her imports being valued at $2,413,687 last year.

Rome Is Revived by Influx of Visitors

Rome.—The influx into Rome of thousands of holy year pilgrims and tourists is rapidly restoring to the city its prewar position as one of the most interesting of European capitals.

Rome's best shopping thoroughfare, the Via Condotti, would be lost in Fifth avenue. In fact, it would stretch hardly more than two blocks of that fine avenue. It could never be found in the miles of shopping streets in Paris. And yet Roman men and women of the better classes are as modishly and as smartly dressed as any the world over.

Rome's greatest avenue, the Corso Umberto, is never wider than a roomy alley, and scores of the city's streets are heritages of the Middle ages with no sidewalks and hardly room for two carriages to pass each other. And yet Rome has some of the finest and most luxurious motor cars in the world, and its wealthier residents are among the best customers of Italy's great motor-car factories.

Paralyzed 6 Years, He's Attacked, Flees

Kearney, N. J.—Fred Kleber of Lyndhurst, N. J., for six years a victim of partial paralysis, walked without crutches recently, due, he believes, to excitement during a rampage of a maniac in a hospital here, when two other patients and three nurses were attacked. Kleber leaped from his bed and sprinted up a stairway to escape Peter Granato, who sprang upon him in bed and attempted to strangle him. Granato leaped from a window after his outbreak, but was captured after a short flight.

Asks to Be Buried Alive in Temple Cornerstone

Tokyo.—Ninety girls bobbed their hair and placed their shorn tresses in the cornerstone of a new temple. The superstition is that this would save the temple from ever being destroyed by fire. One maiden offered herself as a human sacrifice to be buried in the cornerstone. She believed another temple near escaped the earthquake because a young woman had been buried alive in it hundreds of years ago.
